Although a great many people profess to believe that this search for the pole is all nonsense, yet Lieutenant Peary's progress will be watched with great interest everywhere, and news of him will always be read with pleasure. Even if looking for the pole amounts to nothing in itself, the world cannot help admiring the pluck and energy of the great explorer.

Cardinal Gibbons has expressed himself as they please in innocent recreation, acsays that in view of the fact that there conventions or ward meetings at all. must be thousands of visitors who pay no respect to the religious character of the day, it seems a matter of common prudence to provide for them means of leaving them to the temptations outside closed gates. Cholera has broken out in the south of our laws of the country: Francz, and we may expect soon to see the quarantine authorities everywhere busily engaged fighting to keep the pest out of the country. In the mean time it is the duty of every city in the Union, Richmond especially, to go to work for a cheaugh cleaning up.

THE ARGUMENTS FOR AND AGAINST THE NATIONAL BANK ACT.

When we strike the balance in the account for and against our National Bank act, it is astonishing to see how enormously the arguments against it preponderate over those for it. It would be enough to rest the argument against it upon the single fact that it allows some men to enjoy the inestimable blessing of issuing their promissory notes against their property, in any quantities that their business requires,; while it wholly denies this privilege to all other members of society. This ability to use one's credit in the transaction of business is the most important right that a citizen can possess. There is not, and, in the nature of things there cannot be, and it is not desirable that there should be, enough cash for all men to have the quantity necessary to effecting all the transactions that they engage in with cash. No man can conduct any business whatever without using the credit which the property that he owns gives to him. The National Bank act limits and abridges the right of the citizen to make use of his credit. It says that no man shall put out his promissory notes with the design that they shall pass around freely amongst his neighbors as representatives of money unless he first deposits with the Government more of its bonds than the notes he is going to put out amount to. This confines the right of issuing these notes to those few persons who have Government bonds and denies to the great body of citizens their natural right to use their property and credit to the best advantage possible-to any advantage at all. The indictment against the National Bank act is complete when this case is stated. The arguments for the National Bank not are those: The first is that it gives a paper currency that passes at par all over the Union. We have frequently shown that this quality in it makes all of it desirable in the city of New York; that New York bids therefore for all of it and gets all of it, as no other place can bld against her, and thereby leaves all the rest of the country destitute. This quality therefore converts the national bank currency into a curse to all the country except New York. Our supposed blessing therefore is what kills us. Nor are the great body of the people concerned with the fact that the notes all pass at par in all parts of the Union. This fact is a great convenience to those who travel from State to State, but only a small fraction of the population does this. The great body of the people stay in their States year in and year out. What circulates freely in their neighborhood is all that the body of the people want. So that this quality possessed by the national currency is one whose blessing are theoretical only and without a particle of practical value to the people at The next argument for the act is that it requires banks to keep always on hand a fixed sum as a reserve against deposits and circulation. No man with sense or knowledge enough to claim any attention whatever to what he says would argue that a bank should fail to keep always on hand a good and sufficient reserve. It would be as sensible as to argue that a general should fight a battle without a reserve. The question though, is, what reserve should be kept? Should it be a reserve which a law fixes by a hard and fast line that is never, under any circumbe that reserve which a prudent and sagacious man, managing the affairs of that now, just as the Duke of Veragua is the bank, thinks necessary and sufficient about to say farewell to the country for the uses and requirements of the inabout to say farewell to the country which his illustrious ancestor introduced to the public, it is discovered that for the lases and requirements of the institution? STREET IMPROVEMENTS.

The Committee Meet, but Postpone Action on Numerous Measures.

The Committee on Streets held its seminonthly meeting in the City Engineer's office yesterday afternoon. The following members were present: Chairman Curtis and Messrs. Brauer, Joseph W. Carter R. . Davis, Stratton, Thomas and Turpin. essrs. Allen, Boykin and Gray were reported to be out of town.

The first matter taken up was a resolution offered in the Common Council by Captain Guigon, revoking the privilege of crossovers granted to the Richmond Railway and Electric Company on Seventh and Clay and Seventh and Broad streets, unless the cars of the Richmond and Manchester lines going north and south connect at Seventh and Broad streets.

Captain Guigon, who was present, stat-ed in detail the condition of affairs by which persons who wish to go from Sev-enth and Leigh streets have to use three cars within four squares or walk two that the plan recommended by Mr. Gui-gon might be carried out, but Mr. Fisher had declared it impracticable. He asked that the matter be said over until June 28th to enable Mr. Fisher to be present. After some further discussion, Mr. Stratton moved that the Manchester line be required to make their transfers at venth and Broad streets only, or that privilege of the two crossovers be Mr. Carter moved that the whole matter be laid over until the next meeting. The motion of Mr. Stratton was lost, only Messrs. Brauer, Stratton and Tur-pin voting for it. The motion of Mr. Carter to postpone the matter was adopted, with the understanding that the superintendent of the railroad is to be notified of the action of the committee.

FRIVOLOUS SIMPLICITY.

"La mode frou frou," announces a Frenchwoman. I suppose we would say in our bungling fashion, that "The styles rustle" and be no nearer an epigrammatic idea than we are now, with our pages of explanation of dress as she is worn. But e is a general flutter and crumpling of draperies in these first summer days, which partakes of all sweet moving things, leaves and grass and the thousand signs of nature. I suppose the Frenchwoman would say, with equal clevorness, that "La nature frou frou," if she were called upon to make a phrase. Yet dress, as nature, has other moods to please her devotees. One (the former goddess) is a penchant for taut, so verily coquettish frocks, which look like tailormade gowins off on a lark. They aren't made gowns off on a lark. They aren't smothered in ribbons or adrift on a sea of lace. They are too severe to be frivelous and too daring to be uninteresting. They are what the men call "jolly, stunning dresses," and the men have stunning dresses," and the men have instituted retrieved to the art of the control of the c unvitlated natural taste in the art of

To illustrate the fad for frocks without laces and flowers, here is an expensive creation from a Broadway shop which may be duplicated by a cunning seam-stress for much less than half the price. The type, then, is of shot rose and white foulard, rose faille and rose ribbons. The soft gloves of the foulard deepen beautifully into the warmer light of bright rose silk and ribbons, finding thus its character within its single range of colors. The young skirt bears closely of colors. The round skirt hangs closely to the knees, where it begins to flaresemphatically to the hem. Two parallel rolls of silk wound tightly upon a cord are caught around the skirts in the form of verted V is fastened a jainty how of rose ribbon, and about the upper roll of the next V is placed another. The round corsage is tucked within the skirt, and confined by a ribbon fret. The belt is fastened by a firm stiff bow and buckle. Upstanding ends reach well toward the bust. Down the middle, where the frock hooks, is a roll of silk, and running from the tin of the shoulders to the belt buckle the tip of the shoulders to the belt buckl are two more. An odd, loose high collar is edged with the bit of wound color, as well as the edge of the sleeve cape. The sleeve proper is a big upper arm puff and a tight forearm. Two bows of ribbon are
